

England, whose zealous regard for civil liberties outmatches any nation on earth, refuses to outlaw the Communist party.

Present government power in England is the liberal Labor party, which naturally opposes restrictive laws; but there will be no anti-Communist law from the Conservative side either. This much was made clear by a dispatch from London yesterday.

Winston Churchill's Conservatives went on record as guaranteeing there will be no banning of the Communist party should the Conservatives return to power.

All this stands in stark contrast to our own action here in America. The congress enacted by overwhelming majority in both houses a loosely-worded bill directed against the Communist party. President Truman vetoed the measure—which was promptly written into law over his veto.

The president said in his veto message that the bill threatened the civil liberties of all Americans, and is probably unconstitutional. Your correspondent was opposed to the Munn-Nixon anti-Communist bill proposed in an earlier congress, and we incline to the president's side of the argument on the bill which this session finally enacted. The British seem to take the same cautious view.

What is the real issue here? It seems to me it is this: Crimes are committed by individuals and not by parties.

We have laws covering treason by individuals. All we really need to do is vigorously administer those laws. Most of the disloyalty scandals that have rocked our country and England seem to have been due to poor judgment in high quarters in picking associates, and to lax prosecution of the existing security laws.

Crime is committed by persons—not by parties. And the moment you try to write a law making criminals out of a party and all those who may have been listed as belonging to such party you have opened the gates to police search of private homes and seizure of the individual American citizen.

Never in my right mind will I encourage here in America the idea that what our country needs is greater police authority for the central government.

And if you care anything about the privilege of saying and writing what you think, and walking around the streets without fear of going to jail on some politician's say-so, you'll pay attention to this warning.

Will Ask for Overhaul of the RFC

Washington, Sept. 28 —(P)—Senators investigating the reconstruction finance corporation (RFC) will ask congress to overhaul, but not abolish, the huge government lending agency, Senator Fulbright (D-Ark) said today.

One objective, he told reporters, will be to stiffen RFC's resistance to political pressure for loans. In recent months the big agencies lending policies have been under fire from a senate banking subcommittee, headed by Fulbright, which has been investigating many of the loans made to business concerns.

Fulbright said the subcommittee is at work on legislation for submission to congress when it returns Nov. 27.

Although only tentative and incomplete drafting has been done so far, Fulbright said the measure will attempt to remedy what he called RFC's present defects.

Among other things, he said it would give the RFC less freedom in handing out loans, bring its powers within more carefully defined bounds and require more detailed reports on loans that are approved.

Fulbright said political pressures were the only explanation for some of the loans RFC has made. He expressed doubt that politics could be eliminated altogether.

But said he is considering the idea of substituting an administrator for the RFC's present five-member board of directors. His groups hearings, Fulbright said, showed how difficult it is to pin down responsibility for RFC loans under the existing setup.

Apparently in response to congressional criticism, President Truman proposed a shake-up of RFC directors last August. He nominated only two present members of the board.

The nominations were referred to Fulbright's subcommittee but it took no action on them before congress recessed last Saturday. As a result, the nominations were sent back to the President.

Mr. Truman earlier had submitted a reorganization plan which would have placed the RFC, now an independent agency, under the secretary of commerce. The senate rejected the plan, with Fulbright leading the opposition.

Reiterating his objections today, Fulbright said the plan would make RFC more subject to politics than ever.

Gov. McMath Sounds Tax Warning

Before a large crowd in the Third District Livestock Show coliseum this morning Gov. Sid McMath was principal speaker on a program designated as Public Officials day throughout the 17-county district.

Gov. McMath, attending his fourth show here, sounded a warning that increased cost of government and the many improvements planned in Arkansas will mean more taxes.

There is absolutely no possibility of a tax reduction, he warned if the public road, livestock industry promotion, and statewide school improvement programs in Arkansas continue.

These improvements cost money which has to be raised through taxation, and if we are to continue high taxes must continue, he said.

As an example the governor cited U. S. Highway 67 from Texarkana to Memphis, which "must be fixed" at a cost of around 25 million dollars.

Congressmen Oren Harris and Boyd Tackett complimented the district on its new $100,000 coliseum and discussed the importance of the livestock industry for this section.

Gov. McMath was introduced by State Senator F. C. Crow. Glen Wallace, Nashville, president of the Third District Livestock association, was master of ceremonies.

Miss Juandell Potts of Texarkana was crowned rodeo queen of the Third District show in competition last night in the arena. She was presented with a set of complete riding equipment and will represent the district at the state show next week.

Miss Potts, sponsored by the Texarkana Chamber of Commerce was given 96 of a possible 100 score winning out over 4 other contestants. Allison Keith of Stamps was second. Other contestants were Gene McJunkins of Saratoga and Margaret Scott of Prescott.

There will be no rodeo performance tonight. Instead the rodeo will be staged at a special price for benefit of school students this afternoon. All schools of the county were dismissed.

Saturday night at the last rodeo performance four local girls will compete for the title of Miss Hope and the right to represent this city at the Arkansas State Show. They are Bonnie Marie Shirley, Patsy Roberts, Betty Lou Roberts, and Ann Barr.

Eisenhower May Command Europe Army

Washington, Sept. 29 —(P)—Speculation increased today that President Truman may appoint Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower to command the projected international army to defend Western Europe.

This talk is based in part on what Mr. Truman said about Eisenhower at his news conference yesterday and in part on the fact that Washington officials believe a man of outstanding reputation and proved ability should get the supreme command post.

The mere naming of such a man, high officials say, would help to create in non-Communist Europe a new sense of confidence and progress toward real security.

Mr. Truman was asked at the news conference whether he was considering General Eisenhower for some new job, probably in Europe. He replied that Eisenhower is always available at the President's call but that he has not considered him because there is no appointment to make yet.

The foreign ministers of the 12 North Atlantic treaty nations decided in New York earlier this week that Allied forces for the defense of Europe should be merged into a single army under a general staff composed of officers of all the cooperating nations and headed eventually by a supreme commander.

Theoretically this commander might come from any one of the Atlantic powers; actually, the Europeans have already told the U. S. they want an American officer to have the job.

In addition, the state and defense departments are aware that many European leaders have tremendous admiration for Eisenhower because of his achievements as Allied supreme commander in Europe in World War II.

Five Hempstead Men Called by the Draft

Five Hempstead county men left today for induction center at Texarkana, it was announced by the Hempstead Draft Board. They include three whites, Harold Ervin, Cumbe, J. C. Walton, and John Giles Wiggins and two negroes, Worth McFaddin and Elhube Burrell.

Truman Urged to Make a Campaign

By JACK BELL

Washington, Sept. 29 —(P)—Democratic leaders were reported today to be urging President Truman to broadcast at least three frank political appeals for election of a Democratic congress.

The President indicated at yesterday's news conference he thinks he is going to be too busy to do any personal campaigning in the little more than five weeks left before the November election.

Democratic national committee officials haven't given up hope for some one-shot trips to key states. But they indicated they would be glad to settle for two or three nationally-broadcast political appeals by the President for support of his policies.

These party leaders want strong, Democratic talk. They will get some of it, of course, from Vice President Barkley, who is taking to the stump next week in a month-long round of speeches.

His itinerary was announced today by the Democratic national committee. Barkley will cover the country from California to Connecticut, making 42 speeches between Oct. 5 and Nov. 6. He will travel by chartered plane.

If Mr. Truman intends to depart from his stated position of being too occupied with the Korean war and the rearmament program to have time for politics, he hasn't shown it.

He told reporters yesterday that the Korean matter isn't settled, and added that there is a tremendous job ahead in building up American military might.

He hasn't been able to do much lately, he said, except read reports on bills passed by congress before it went home.

He hadn't had time, the president said, to decide what will be done about Federal Judges Carroll Switzer of Iowa and Neal Andrews of Georgia, serving without pay on recess appointments since the senate rejected their nominations.

Hershey Wants Extension of Draft

Washington, Sept. 29 —(P)—Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, selective service director, recommended today that the draft should be extended from 21 months to 30 months.

He advanced the proposal as a means of maintaining an army of 1,500,000.

Hershey made this and three other major recommendations to the house armed service committee, which is studying possible revision in the draft.

The other suggested changes: To modify deferment for dependency. He would have deferment for collateral dependents wiped out. To remove restrictions on induction of veterans under 26 years of age.

To watch carefully that the "acceptability standard does not get out of hand."

In explanation of the third suggestion Hershey said he believed "we are going to get a new approach to capacity to serve."

Although he did not specify, this apparently would mean less strict qualifications.

Hershey made no recommendations for changing the present draft age of 19 through 25.

Two Doughboys Club to Death Six Gooks in Making Their Way to Safety After Trap

By HAL BOYLE

Korea —(P)—Two doughboys who clubbed six Red soldiers to death with empty rifles during an 18-day stay behind enemy lines have been freed by the American advance.

It has rained most of the days of their adventure and they returned to their own lines shivering and hungry. Their uniforms were in dirty tatters. They had lived the entire time on grapes, apples and peaches plucked from native hillside orchards.

"Once a Red patrol passed so close to us as we lay by a road that we could have spit on them," said Pfc. Kenneth E. Tye of 2814 77th street, Kansas City.

They used an old woodsman's trick to keep warm. "We took turns sleeping on each other at night, it was so cold," said Sgt. Charles R. North of Bartaborn, O.

They said they joined up with another outfit when their own unit was overrun during an enemy attack. The Reds came screaming back again in another brutal attack and got behind the second American outfit. The two escaped by dashing forward through the enemy's positions.

"They were many miles north of the Allied stronghold of Taegu—and the North Korean army was making its final convulsive effort to seize Taegu."

They hid out the next day and that night unexpectedly ran into a Red soldier who began jabbering at them in Korean in the dark.

"We had run out of ammunition so I killed him with my rifle butt," said Sergeant North.

Figuring capture would mean only torture and death, the two pledged each other to die rather than surrender—and to cause as much trouble behind the enemy lines as they could.

"We wanted to wipe out their mortar positions but we didn't have the firepower to try," said the sergeant. "They were well camouflaged and every time one of our artillery spotter planes came over they buttoned up."

They saw many enemy troops and observed that they were so short of weapons that only about one out of three carried rifles. The others were armed only with grenades.

Churches to Register Women

The council of Church Women have designated the week of October 8-15 as Ecumenical Register Week, it was announced today by Mrs. Jim McKenzie, president of the Council's Registration Committee.

Council members will devote the week to an intensive effort to reach all the Protestant women in this area who have not yet had an opportunity to enroll on the Ecumenical Register of Church women.

The Register is a nationwide project to put American Protestant women on record for greater Christian cooperation throughout the world.

Red China May Win U.N. Debate Rights

New York, Sept. 29 —(P)—Red China is expected to win her long fight for an invitation to participate in United Nations security council debates today.

The invitation does not mean that the Communists will take over China's U. N. seat from the Nationalists, but that her representatives will be allowed to present their complaints of American aggression to the council in person.

U. S. Delegate Warren R. Austin has denounced this as letting the Communists in "through the back door."

The council meets for an historic session at which the necessary seven votes are expected to be cast for a Yugoslav resolution providing that a Red Chinese representative be present when the body discusses Formosa Nov. 12.

A similar resolution, presented by Ecuador, was defeated yesterday when Yugoslavia abstained.

When Yugoslav Delegate Ales Bebler saw he had caused his defeat he asked President Sir Gladwyn Jebb of Britain to record him as voting "yes, but this was disallowed."

Instead, the council agreed that Bebler could reintroduce the motion as his own today. There remained the possibility that Ecuador might choose, at the last moment, to reintroduce its own motion.

Nationalist Chinans Dr. T. F. Tsiang has served notice that he will try to veto the invitation, but this is expected to be overruled by a presidential ruling stated. In such a way that Tsiang would have to vote "yes in order to oppose it. Affirmative votes do not constitute a veto."

The Soviet Union now finds itself in the unpleasant position of supporting a proposal put forth by Premier Marshal Tito's representative, or going on record as casting the decisive vote against an invitation to Red China.

Hopes Dashed for Leveling Off of Prices

By SAM DAWSON

New York, Sept. 29 —(P)—Rising costs of marketing foodstuffs may dash hopes that the cost of eating will level off. The hopes were raised by the price drops in some foodstuffs on future markets, due to "peace scare selling."

All hands are still counting on a seasonal drop in the price of meat — unless public appetite for it mounts even faster than livestock pours into the market. The appetites will be backed by rising incomes, due to more jobs and higher wages for some workers.

But there are plenty of warnings today that the upswing in the cost of living — in which the cost of food pays a major role — will continue even if an early end to the Korean fighting takes the wind out of the commodity futures markets.

The Bureau of Labor statistics reports that retail food prices resumed their rising trend in the first half of September. And shoppers say that this week's decline in some wholesale prices for food haven't yet shown up at the stores.

The cost of getting food from the farm and onto the table continues to rise — and faster than the price of farm products, the department of agriculture reports.

The cost of getting food from the farm to the consumer last year was the highest on record, the department reports. And the upward trend was continuing into this summer.

Part of the increase in marketing costs is laid to rising transportation rates, part to rising pay scales for those who handle food along

No Letup in Defense Warms Mr. Truman

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, Sept. 29 —(P)—President Truman is setting the administration the task of keeping the people alert to the continuing danger of war with also touching off some "peace psychology."

He says there cannot be letup in defense preparations until the Korean war is over, that he expects opposition to a continued expansion of the program.

But he didn't tell a news conference yesterday how he has defense and diplomatic moves would go about keeping the defense program alive.

The President says he hopes peace, which he has long said will be realized.

It may be an uneasy peace, at least at the outset and perhaps years. Or it could be only a truce between wars, that which ended with Communist aggression in Korea last year.

County Judges to Fight Plan for Schools

Little Rock, Sept. 29 —(P)—The politically powerful Arkansas Association of County Judges was expected to begin today an all-out fight against a proposal to give schools the first $42,000,000 of annual state revenues.

The judges were to vote on resolution to put the association on record as opposed to proposed constitutional amendment No. 11, which will be on the November general election ballot.

The amendment would guarantee public schools at least 6 a month for each school-aged child in the state from the first allotment of general fund revenues each year. Schools now get about $14,000,000 from the first allotment.

Judges yesterday expressed fear that such a commitment of funds would greatly reduce county services by reducing the turnback payments to the counties.

The resolution was approved by the associations resolutions committee.

State Comptroller Lee Roy Beasley told the judges passage of the proposed amendment would cut county turnbacks 1,600,000 a year unless state taxes are raised.

Beasley said adoption of the proposed prohibition act at the general election would deprive the state of some $2,000,000 a year in alcoholic beverage taxes.

Widow of Henry Ford Dies at 84

Detroit, Sept. 29 — (AP) — Mrs. Henry Ford, widow of the world-famous automobile pioneer, died early today at the age of 84.

The farmers daughter who came to great wealth and renown through her husband's genius and her faith in his work was the victim of a heart ailment.

She died at 2 a. m. (EST) in Henry Ford hospital. A family spokesman said the cause of death was acute coronary occlusion.

For some time Mrs. Ford had been troubled with a heart condition and in recent months she had twice visited the hospital.

Yesterday she entered the hospital for the last time. Only a few persons close to the family knew that her condition had again worsened.

Mrs. Ford was born in 1866. She spent 60 years of wedded life with her husband until his death in 1947.

Their only son, Edsel, died in 1943. At that time he was president of the Ford Motor Co. as successor to his father. The elder Ford had then retired.

Mrs. Ford's survivors include her grandson, Henry Ford II, now president of the company.

publish anything about it. Why? Because where the government is in full control, they argue, the government can check on everyone anyway to see whether there's any question of their loyalty or of their being Communists.

But when the government is getting secret work done by a private firm where this security check might not be possible, then the secretary of defense would have to post notice about the Communists. This, they contend, would be a dead give-away that the plant is engaged in secret government work.

But some of those responsible for putting the bill together in congress say that isn't so. They explain it this way:

The secretary of defense never needs to post a notice at any plant, laboratory or other place where he wants to keep out Communists. Why? Because the government can check on anyone trying to enter.

But why then does the bill say the secretary of defense shall post such notice and publicize the identity of a secret plant?

Only for this reason, they say. Under this anti-Communist bill a Communist would be committing a crime not only if he held a job in a defense plant but even if he sought such a job without first revealing he was a Communist.

And — the penalty for such an offense is 10,000 fine and 10 years in jail.

So, these backers of the bill say, the secretary of defense wouldn't have to post such a notice, or publicize it, unless he wanted to get any Communist fined or jailed if he tried to get in.

Of course, there's another point here:

The jail or fine couldn't be imposed on a Communist unless after a long legal argument, maybe lasting for years, it was finally proved in court that he was a member of a Communist group which took orders from Moscow and wanted to overthrow this government by force.

If you're confused by this time, that's probably mild to the confusion which may follow if any test is ever made of this and law-years start arguing about it.

From what's been said here you can see they're arguing already.

The FORMER MISS FREY

Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

AT precisely 10 o'clock Edie Frey and Dan Reagan walked into Lewis Northcott's huge office.

Reagan carried a large parcel, done up in brown wrapping paper, under his arm.

Northcott was still gray and formidable looking. He gazed at them from behind his gold-rimmed glasses, his eyes inscrutable.

"I understand that I'm to see something very fine this morning," he said.

"Yes, certainly are," replied Edie boldly, as Reagan unwrapped the package.

There was practically no expression on Northcott's face as he looked at every layout, read every word of every piece of copy. When he finished he stared at Edie and Reagan so long that Edie grew apprehensive. To cover her nervousness she lit a cigarette and tried to make her eyes as inscrutable as Northcott's.

At last Northcott spoke. "These," he said, pointing at the advertisements, "confirm an opinion that I've had for some time."

"Yes?" Edie was afraid that she babbled the word.

"Which is," Northcott said dispassionately, "that Frey & Company is the best advertising agency in New York."

With difficulty Edie restrained an impulse to shout. She was conscious of Reagan's big body relaxing in the chair beside her.

"Does that mean, Mr. Northcott," she asked, "that you like this campaign?" He looked straight at her. "I'll buy it," he said. "Just as it stands."

BACK at the agency they found a pale and haggard Jeffrey. Edie had expected him to remain at home and make good her spurious explanation to Reagan.

That Jeff had had a wretched attack of indigestion in the night. Now, however, here was Jeff, a ghost of himself, with dark circles under his eyes and his fingers twitching.

But if Reagan guessed the truth, he gave no sign.

"It's in the bag, Jeff," he said. "Thank goodness," Jeff sighed. "Sorry, though, that I couldn't pull my weight in the boat. You two must have done a swell selling job."

"We didn't have to," Reagan told him. "The stuff sold itself."

"That's great," said Jeff. "But I hope Northcott doesn't change his mind. He's funny like that, you know."

It seemed almost like an abortive attempt to pour cold water over their little triumph. She looked at him irritably and she decided then, that he was more nervous and distraught than even the robust hangerover he had acquired seemed to warrant. For the thousandth time she wondered what it was that had upset Jeff and Myron so terribly on the previous night.

But she forbore to inquire again, and they settled down to a period of comparative peace both at home and at the agency. During it a phenomenon occurred. Jennifer not only joined the family at dinner one night — she remained home all evening.

Edie lifted her eyebrows, but said nothing. When the phenomenon persisted through successive nights, however, she remarked upon it. "You're getting

Apparently This Is One War That Professional Soldiers Had to Fight, Not Civilians

By HAL BOYLE

On the Road to Seoul — (AP) — There is a lift of laughter along the front.

For the first time the American soldiers can look at the Korea campaign with a real sense of humor.

He has lost his grudge against his country. For long weeks he was dazed by the realization that he was an outpost warrior of a land wealthy beyond belief — but a land too weak militarily to quickly settle a peace — threatening war in an obscure and backward oriental nation.

Men and machines now have appeared on the battlefield to end the days of sacrifices and to muscle through to victory.

And that has restored the faith of army men in the American homeland. Some of them have been overseas so long that subconsciously they had come to think of the United States chiefly as a supply base that had helped them occupy Japan in comfort.

The middle and upper level army brass, however, is less happy than the average rifle-carrying foot soldier.

The casualty rate, as usual in warfare, has been particularly high among junior officers and noncoms. They are the ones who must generally tell the men to get up and go — and who must then personally lead the privates into battle.

At the combat level the army feels it has lost, in a small-scale war, too many trained soldiers who ought to be saved for a possible large scale action.

These include the battle experienced sergeants from the Second World War and the young graduates of West Point, in whom the country has invested thousands of dollars to learn the tactics and the strategy of warfare.

A cynical officer of the national guard would put it this way: "The war in Korea came up so fast that the regular army had to fight. They didn't have time to train and train the civilian draftees."

But a staff officer of the regular army said:

"We had to fight with what we had. We have lost in combat men who ought to serve as a training corps for the future."

"And we have killed off future leadership here during an emergency that we may need later in a bigger war. The West Point class of 1949 in particular has been hard hit. We have lost lieutenants we might want as generals 10 years from now. And they are gone."

This doesn't concern the average soldier in any army he joined for security and which suddenly had plunged him into the insecurity of battle. More signed up to learn a trade than signed to hold a hill in Korea.

But they're finding fun again now — just as the drafted soldiers did in the last World War when the tide turned. They've got back to quarrelling about the team that will win the world series.

"The war is all over," jokes a veteran. "Really — no kidding?" says a recruit hopefully. And the answer comes:

"Yeah, all over the next hill."

But it is true. The United Nations has won a short war in a long struggle for world peace.

West German Police Set for Commies

Bonn, Germany, Sept. 29 — (AP) — West German police rushed preparations today to meet an expected onslaught by thousands of rioting Communists in at least nine cities of the industrial Ruhr this weekend.

From Hamburg in the north corner of the Allied zones to Cologne on the Rhine, cities were gripped by tension as police summoned reserves and warned the populace to stay off the streets and avoid public gatherings.

British authorities said intelligence reports indicate that Communist demonstrations will erupt in nine or ten cities despite Allied and German bans.

The Communists have publicly trumpeted their intention to "fight ceaselessly against the strengthening of eastern defenses in Germany and to undermine the West German government."

The governments refugee ministry announced today that Soviet agents have been flooding into Western Germany recently disguised as refugees. These agents apparently have been assigned to spawn chaos by fomenting riots.

The ministry estimated that the influx of refugees from the East doubled during August over July and now numbers 1,000 persons a day.

Officials of the all-German affairs ministry, which works closely with state interior ministries and police, reported the Communists will ignite their biggest demonstrations in Cologne. These officials said the Reds hoped to embarrass Chancellor Konrad Adenauer by a major effort in his hometown.

The Cologne police director said 10,000 members of the Communist Free German Youth (FJ) are expected to mass there.

Other cities expected to be affected include Hannover, Dortmund, Muenster, Bochum, Hamburg, Essen and Ludwigshafen.

Claims Two Are Trying to Oust Gen. MacArthur

Indianapolis, Sept. 29 — (AP) — President Truman and Secretary of Defense Marshall, says Senator Capehart (R-Ind.), "are conspiring to oust General MacArthur from his Far East command after the Nov. 7 election."

"Government circles in Washington are conscious of the bitter animosity held by President Truman and General Marshall against General Douglas MacArthur," Capehart told a Republican rally in suburban southport last night.

Capehart, campaigning for reelection, said MacArthur has advocated supporting China's Nationalist government and "opposed the Marshall-Truman policy which delivered China to the Reds and 'brought on the Korean war.'"

Capehart added that General MacArthur "warned the President not to withdraw our troops from South Korea in the first place because it would take the blood to be quite the home girl," she said. "I'm looking at her queerly. What's the matter? All the law watching television?" "You wouldn't you like to know," said Edie, and left the room.

Edie smiled to herself. She did know one thing positively. Tommy Melbourne was giving Jeff the absent treatment, in a most comprehensive way.

A few days later, she read in the social notes that Mr. Hamilton Grieve had rented Wendover House, Bermuda.

Nothing could have delighted Edie more. And yet, for some reason, the news item seemed incomplete. She thought about it, off and on, for half a day before the explanation came. Wendover House was Gil Summerfield's place.

SHE called Gil immediately, saying that she needed a lunch companion. He jumped at the chance to remedy this situation.

"Now then, Gilbert," she said, when she met him. "Let's go into the workings of your fine Italian hand."

"En?" He was elaborately careless.

"Don't stall. I mean about Ham Grieve and your little hideaway in Bermuda, of course."

"Oh, that?" Gil smiled. "Well, it seems Ham and I belong to the same club. I happened to meet him there the other day and I bought him a drink. Which isn't hard to do, incidentally. Well, we got to talking about... about the Frey family. And I said that it was too bad, wasn't it?"

"What was too bad?"

His eyes were innocent. "Why, about Jenn. This business of her not coming into her money till she's 30 and having to depend on an allowance from you in the meantime."

Edie stared at him. "Gil Summerfield! Did you tell him that?"

"I certainly did."

"And he actually believed you?" Gil grinned with relish. "Why wouldn't he? He knows that I've always known you people pretty well."

Sicily Society Linked With Underworld

Kansas City, Sept. 29 — (AP) — A mysterious Sicilian society and its underworld operations came under scrutiny of the senate crime investigating committee today.

The organization is the Mafia. A witness told the committee, holding a three-day hearing in President Truman's home county, that Mafia was linked with gambling, murder, narcotics and other crime in many of the nations cities.

Among persons summoned to testify today — the second day of the hearing — were several whose names were mentioned in connection with the secret society.

Claude A. Folmer, a federal narcotics agent, told the committee yesterday:

"For many years Kansas City has been the scene of violence, bloodshed, and terror in connection with traffic and illicit narcotic drug involving for the most part persons of Sicilian origin banded together in a secret society known as the Mafia."

He detailed operations of a narcotics ring shattered here in 1942. The agent testified that five murders in the last few years have been connected with the narcotics ring and the trials that broke it up.

The most vicious killing was that of Carl Carramusa who was the governments principal witness in the trials, Folmer said.

"Carramusa went into hiding, changed his name and began a new life with his wife and daughter in Chicago," Folmer said.

"Three years after the trials, in June, 1945, in Chicago, Carramusa was head blown off by a shotgun as his family was about to join him on the way to their wedding anniversary party."

Cities mentioned in connection with Mafia operations included New York, New Orleans, Tampa, Fla., Detroit, Los Angeles, Galveston, Denver and San Francisco.

Folmer said he believed the Mafia was in on the gangland slaying of Charles Binaggio, Kansas City Northside political leader, who was shot to death last April 5. His slaying had never been solved.

Clubs

SWEET HOME

The Sweet Home Home Demonstration Club met on September 15th at 2 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Bill Wright. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Zack Stone. Fifteen members present. Scripture was read by Mrs. Bright. The group repeated the Lords Prayer. Donating food for the booth at the Fair and raising funds to build a community club house was discussed. A committee was appointed by the club with Mrs. W. T. Yarberry as chairman and Mrs. Mont Montgomery, Mrs. O. L. Ward, and Mrs. B. J. Warden as committee members.

The surprise package was won by Mrs. C. A. Phillips. After refreshments were served the meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. Ward on October 19. The County Council meets on the regular club day.

There will be a pot luck supper and tacky party at the home of Mrs. Bill Bright on October 7.

HINTON

The Hinton Home Demonstration Club met on Monday, September 15th in the home of Mrs. Berlin Jones. The Home was decorated throughout with beautiful summer flowers.

The Devotional was led by the hostess. The group sang the song of the month and had prayer. The group repeated the club creed. Roll call was answered by the members. The minutes were read and approved as read. The treasurer's report was given and the old and new business was discussed. The group also discussed helping with the food booth during the fair with each one agreeing to help and donate food.

The club received a card of thanks from Mr. and Mrs. Ed Black and received a free will offering.

The next regular meeting will be with Mrs. Stella Adams. The demonstration will be on cleaning sewing machines.

Refreshments were served by the hostess. After the meeting was adjourned the hostess showed the group her deep freeze, and opened her birthday gifts.

SHOWER SPRINGS
The Shower Springs Home Demonstration Club had a called meeting September 19th since the regular meeting day came during fair week. During a short business meeting, Mrs. Aaron, president, told the group what the club was supposed to furnish at the concession. Club members agreed to donate the food needed.

Two short plays will be presented in the near future at the community building by the club women.

A landscaping report was given by Mrs. Ross Bales. The surprise package, which contained a very pretty scarf, was won by Mrs. Vernon Pate. After the meeting adjourned, a get - well shower was given for Mrs. Ethel Young, who has been ill for quite some time.

The hostesses, Mrs. Ross Bales and Mrs. Delmer Irvin, served cake, cookies, and cold drinks to fifteen club members, and one visitor, Mrs. Bryan Ruggles.

Hostesses for October will be Mrs. Mary Jo Goodwin and Mrs. Troy Greenlee.

MELROSE
Nine members of the Melrose Home Demonstration Club met at Fair Park for their September Floyd Mangum, after which Mrs. meeting.

The devotional was given by Mrs. Otha Roberts led in prayer.

The food booth for the fair was discussed, and plans made to contribute the club's part of the food.

Instead of the regular meeting the group was shown pictures and told of the tour, which two of the members made in August. Everyone enjoyed this very much.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. J. F. Mangum in October.

After the meeting closed, refreshments were served by Mrs. J. F. Merchent and Mrs. Holomon House.

COLUMBUS
The Columbus Home Demonstration Club met Monday, September 18th at the Masonic Hall, with Mrs. J. O. Johnson and Mrs. Horace Ellen as hostesses. There were ten members and one visitor, Mrs. Lowell Vaught, present.

The meeting was called to order by the president. The Home Demonstration Club members repeated the creed. The devotional was given by Mrs. J. O. Johnson. The Lords Prayer was repeated in unison. The roll call was answered with, "The most refreshing food for a hot day"

The secretary, Mrs. T. M. McCorkle, read the minutes of the last meeting and they were approved.

During the recreation period Mrs. C. R. White and Mrs. Fred Caldwell led the group in several games the prize being won by Mrs. J. E. Deloney.

The October meeting will be held in the Masonic Hall, with a demonstration on learning sewing machines by Mrs. Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent. Hostess will be Mrs. J. E. Deloney.

Senate Probers
Open Hearings on Crime

Kansas City, Sept. 28 —(AP)—The senate crime investigating committee today opened hearings expected to delve into the political interests of the underworld.

Approximately 30 witnesses have been summoned for the through Saturday.

Among those subpoenaed is former State Attorney General Roy McKittick, a Missouri candidate for governor in 1928.

HOME-BODY—The story of home-building, from log cabin to ranch-type modern, is traced on the white taffeta evening skirt of Geneva Tomlin. The Washington, D. C., girl donned the circular costume, designed by artist Charles Latshaw, while making her rounds as "Miss National Home Week."

DOROTHY DIX Make Minutes Count

Dear Miss Dix: I am a young married woman, working in an office where I have a lot of idle time on my hands. How can I best employ this? Should I read? If so, what sort of books? How much time should a young married couple give to housecleaning? It has become an argument between husband and myself. I find something to do every night about the house which leaves us no time for pleasure, to which he objects. How much should a husband help his wife with the housework if both work during the day and then the wife comes home to do the cooking?

ALICE
Answer: The more proficient you are in your work, the better pay you will get. It is the experts in any line who get the fat pay envelopes, and so the very best way you can put in your idle time is to study your job. No matter what you do, learn to do it better. Get the accuracy and speed that only comes by incessant practice. If you are a telephone operator, be our little Mrs. Blank who never plugs in the wrong numbers, never forgets a message. If you are a stenographer, memorize the dictionary, and particularly learn how to spell all the technical terms of that your employer uses in his letters. If you are a bookkeeper, make yourself a wizard at figures. If you are a file clerk, be the memory of your firm.

As long as you have to work to spend your hours in an office and you have to go through certain motions of labor, why not make this count, as you can do by improving your work?

Reading Profitable
Of course reading is a profitable way to spend your time, always provided you read "worth-while" books. As to what to read, go to your nearest library and talk it over with some sympathetic librarian who will start you on the right pathway.

The only answer one can possibly make to the question of how much time a young married couple should give to housecleaning is as much as necessary. Cleanliness is next to righteousness in a home. In fact, the home spirit cannot survive in an untidy house.

The girl who keeps on with her job after marriage has an entirely different domestic status from the one who has nothing to do but keep house. Then the husband should do his share of the housework. He should do his part of the sweeping and cleaning and cooking, and not dump all the labor of making a home on his wife. When a wife goes fifty-fifty with her husband in working outside of the home, it is up to him to give her a square deal in it.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Please answer these questions concerning matrimonial agencies. (1) Are a substantial number of marriages made through these agencies are successful? (2) Are not marriages through these agencies dependent upon the financial condition of the persons involved? (3) In the absence of the conventional way to marriage would you advise the services of a matrimonial agency? E. A. W.

Answer: There are no statistics about the way that mailorder marriages turn out, but your own common sense must tell you that very few of them can be successful. Heaven knows there is risk enough in marrying a man or woman you made mud pies with in your childhood and went to school with; whose every quirk of character you think you know, whose family you know and whose background is the same as your own. Why, then, the hazardous chance that

Priority on War Orders to Industries

Washington, Sept. 28 —(AP)—The government soon will announce a priority order directing factories, mills and mines to fill military orders ahead of any others.

Aides of William H. Harrison, administrator of the national production authority, said today the regulation is due this week-end or early next week. They said it will be simple but mandatory.

The officials disclosed that several other orders — setting up allocations, or limiting the civilian use of scarce materials — can be expected in the near future.

One of them, for example, will limit the use of scarce materials in the production of civilian goods.

These moves underlined President Truman's assertion that the armament program will go ahead at full speed despite the apparent collapse of Communist invasion forces in Korea.

At about the same time Mr. Truman told that to his news conference, Secretary of the Interior Chapman set up a new "defense petroleum agency to deal with military-civilian problems in oil, gasoline and aviation fuel.

Interior experts have reported it may be necessary to limit the octane rating of gasoline to insure sufficient high-octane fuel for the swiftly expanding air forces.

At the request of the oil industry, the new DPA was set up separately from Interior's newly-born minerals and energy administration. The latter agency will continue to regulate coal, electric power and the country's metal and mineral resources in the interest of defense production.

The federal reserve board continued work on proposed new restraints on real estate credit. A regulation is expected next week fixing minimum down payments on privately-financed home mortgages. Federal financing terms also will be tightened, it was understood.

Under NPAs forthcoming priority order, only one rating will be established, in contrast with the complex priority structure set up during World War II. There will be no first, second, third or tenth place priority; military orders will get preference, others will not.

Appointed on Board of Trustees
Little Rock, Sept. 28 —(AP)—Miss Pauline Hoeltzel, English instructor at Little Rock Junior college, has been appointed a member of the University of Arkansas board of trustees. Governor McMath announced the appointment last night at a meeting of the Little Rock women's division of the Democratic party, of which Miss Hoeltzel is chairman. She succeeds J. C. Black of Rogers.

Cancer research by the use of electrical shock in rats is being conducted in the Bio-Research laboratory of Florida Southern College at Lakeland.

Star of the Saenger Feature Here Sunday is a 'Winchester 73'

James Stewart Shares Honors in Western

Sharing honors with James Stewart are Shelley Winters, Dan Duryea, and Stephen McNally, in the new feature "Winchester 73," opening at the Saenger Theatre, Sunday. The picture has a history that is an interesting reading as do the biographies of any of the players involved.

The rifle, from which the western film's title is derived, was one of the number manufactured by the Winchester people in 1873 and called "One in a Thousand" because of the Winchester rifle that every thousandth rifle in the assembly line be given a special hand-tooled custom treatment, making that particular gun a lethal weapon with absolute perfection guaranteed. Because of this, it was given the various sobriquets of "Fast action life insurance" and "The gun that won the war."

More than a year of painstaking research by the Winchester company and members of the Universal-International Studio research staffs shows that particular rifle saved many lives, was responsible for the deaths of more than a score of men and was once the property of one of Custer's men at the Battle of Little Big Horn.

Research shows that the gun's serial number designates its manufacture in December, 1873, and that it was shipped out to a hardware merchant in Jonesboro, Arkansas, who had waited ten months to get one of the original "One in a Thousand." He sold it immediately to a frontiersman named Abner Grady, who put it to good use two months later, by killing three men who were members of a group of cattlethieves.

The movie gun was subsequently traced to Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Missouri, and finally to a Rolfe Stokes of La Crescenta, California, who turned it over as a loan to Universal-International Studio for use in "Winchester 73."

During the filming of the action film the famed rifle suffered the indignity of being loaded with blanks for the first time in its colorful career. And that was when Stewart put a bullet into the heart of a screen bad man, Stephen McNally, in the final reel of the movie.

Stewart, himself, may be the next owner of the gun. Following the completion of "Winchester 73," the actor started negotiating for its purchase.

"Winchester 73" was directed by Anthony Mann and produced by Aaron Rosenberg.

Truman Puzzles Politicians

Washington Sept. 28 — (AP) — In political circles around Washington, a lot of people were puzzled today by the way President Truman has been filling top level government jobs.

One thing appears true on the record. The victors have not been getting all the spoils, and the President has denied key jobs to some of his most effective money raisers in the 1948 campaign.

The newest appointment to occasion such surprise is that of Walter S. Gifford, former head of American Telephone and Telegraph company, as ambassador to London. It was announced yesterday.

Far from being a good Democrat, Gifford was found to be down in administration political reference books as a good Republican. And he was not given just any diplomatic post, in terms of prestige, he got the best. Traditionally the assignment to the Court of St. James had often been a prize political plum.

Gifford said in a statement from New York that he was "very happy for the opportunity which the appointment gives me to be of service in these critical times."

His selection fit a pattern noted in other recent personnel changes. Louis Johnson, whom Mr. Truman let out two weeks ago as secretary of defense, was one of the President's most industrious backers in the 1948 election campaign. Many insiders credit him with raising the funds to fuel the drive which produced the Truman victory.

Now Johnson is completely out of the administration — replaced by Gen. George C. Marshall, who has said he spent so many years as a soldier that he never developed any personal politics. When he served formerly as secretary of state, Marshall ran a strictly bipartisan shop and kept rigidly clear of political involvements.

In order to name Gifford to London Mr. Truman had to refuse the assignment to former Ambassador James Bruce, who had previously served as envoy to Argentina as director of the European rearmament program in the state department.

Like Johnson, Bruce is reported to have contributed generously to the 1948 political war chest and to have raised additional funds. Months ago newsmen heard that the President had told him he would go to London when Ambassador Lewis Douglas quit.

But when Douglas sent word about three weeks ago that his health would not permit him to serve any longer, the President decided on Gifford. The decision apparently was made on Secretary of State Acheson's recommendation.

In 1949, the population of Australia was estimated at 7,912,000.

Snow and Rain Help Snuff Out Forest Fires

Edmonton, Alberta, Sept. 28 — (AP) — Snows and drenching rains have snuffed out a chain of some 100 forest fires which blazed across Canada's northwest this week. Officials said the danger now is over.

The giant rash of fires, which attracted attention throughout the continent, stretched from the Saskatchewan border across northern Alberta and 300 miles north along the Alaska highway.

Smoke from the flaming woodlands caused a vast pall that spread thousands of miles eastward, blotting out Monday night's eclipse of the moon and creating a haze as far away as New York.

With the entry of Newfoundland into confederation, Canada became the main fish producing country in the world in terms of dollar value.

Long Period of Controls Seen by Business

(Editors's note: Business and industry are gearing for an indefinite period of controls and restrictions in carrying out their role in the nation's rearmament program. More aware than the general public that we are entering an economic "twilight zone" of neither war nor peace. Their problems are analyzed by Sam Dawson. Associated Press business news columnist, in the following article, the second of two on the coming impact of the defense program.)

By Sam Dawson
New York, Sept. 28 — (AP) — Many businessmen are getting set to enter the twilight zone of defense mobilization. It will be a strange period, with war-type controls but without the sound of guns.

The nation's economic activity already is at a postwar high, as industry and trade work as fast as they can to make and lay up stores of civilian goods.

But most businessmen seem more aware than a large part of the public that, unless the chart of the rearmament program is changed, it will set in, probably soon after the election, with blasts of restrictions and controls.

Overall production will continue at a high prosperity peak. Almost everyone will be working, at good pay, even if paying large taxes. But businessmen are being bombarded this week with official warnings of the curbs and annoyances that will go with it. All industry — even if not directly engaged in defense production — will have some government agency always peering over its shoulder.

Here is what the crystal gazers see ahead for business:

1. Labor: Wages are on the way up in many industries. Some expect unions to ask for still higher pay by the end of the year.

Already some companies are scrambling for workers — in sharp contrast to the start of World War II, when there was a large pool of jobless men. Shortages of skilled auto labor sparked the recent general wage boosts in Detroit. West Coast aircraft makers look to the east for skilled mechanics. New England textile, metal working, machine tool and jewelry plants are reported shopping for trained men.

The labor department estimates that a full scale mobilization would mean a drain of 6.6 million workers from production of purely civilian goods. (That is around 10 per cent of the present total labor force). Meanwhile, partial mobilization will mean drafting of more young men, calling up of more trained reserve officers.

2. Profits: Production rates will be high — especially for those in defense work — but earnings will be milked by taxes. Corporate in-

Public Is Confused About Red Law

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Sept. 27 — (AP) — There is probably as much confusion in the public mind over the new anti-Communist law as over any law of recent years.

Here are the answers to a few questions:

Q. The law says the government can round up Communists and throw them into detention camps. Does that mean the FBI will start such a roundup right away, or when?

A. The law doesn't give the government power to make such a roundup now. It says such a roundup can be made only if (1) the U.S. is invaded, (2) congress declares war, or (3) there's an uprising here to help some foreign power.

Q. It has been estimated that there are 60,000 to 70,000 full fledged Communist party members in this country. Would they all be rounded up if one of those three things happened?

A. Probably not, although the government could suit itself about that. But the law says he government shall round up "each person as to whom there is reasonable ground to believe that such person probably will engage in, or probably will conspire with others to engage in, acts of espionage or of sabotage."

That language seems to leave it wide open to the government to decide who among the Communists is a potential spy or saboteur. Recently FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover said there are about 12,000 dangerous Communists in this country. That might seem to indicate the FBI would roundup perhaps only 12,000 Communists. But —

Another part of the law says Communists are agents of Moscow, seeking the overthrow of this government, and all engaged in an international conspiracy to take over the world.

When you remember that — plus the fact that the law lets the government decide what Communists can be arrested in an emergency — you can see that the government has wide latitude in deciding whom it should pick up.

Q. Can Communists grabbed by the FBI in such an emergency (explained in Nos. 1, 2 and 3 above) be held indefinitely?

A. Yes, but —. The "but" means they will be given a chance to show they're not dangerous and will be released if they can prove that satisfactorily to the government. This is how:

1. When arrested Communists can't be thrown into a jail with criminals. In short, they can't be put in jails or penitentiaries. So the government will have to set up some kinds of camps for them or clear out a penitentiary for them.

2. Some time after his arrest — the Communists is brought before a government official who'll have the title of "preliminary hearing officer."

If there is an emergency requiring wholesale arrest of Communists these "hearing officers" will have to be appointed, perhaps several hundred of them.

And it may be necessary to check them to be sure they're not their Communists nor sympathizers. That would take time.

The Communist can have his own lawyer represent him and can cross-examine witnesses brought against him. But —

The government doesn't have to produce any witnesses if it thinks doing so might not be good for the country.

This means the FBI can make charges against the man without saying where it got its information against him. This is a pretty tough section of the law.

3. After this examination, the hearing officer can order the Communist released, or he can decide the Communist should be kept in custody.

4. The President will set up a board of nine men, called the detention review board. Any Communist ordered kept in custody by the reviewing officer can appeal to this board for a hearing. But, again, at this hearing the FBI won't have to give away any of its secrets in explaining why it wants the Communist held.

But at the board hearing the Communist can have a lawyer and has the right to cross-examine any witnesses against him. Actually, the board can make its hearings secret, since the law says the board can consider evidence offered by the government, even though the evidence can't be made public.

5. After such a hearing, the board can order the Communist released or kept in custody. (In all these steps — arrest, examination by a hearing officer, and examination by the board — the Communist can be held if there is "reasonable" grounds for thinking he might help in spying or sabotage.

6. If turned down by the board, the Communist can appeal to the U.S. Court of Appeals and, if turned down there, to the Supreme court. All these steps would take a lot of time.

SENTENCED

Houston, Tex., Sept. 28 — (AP) — Paul V. Patton was sentenced to three years in prison yesterday for trying to rob the National Bank of Commerce with a dummy hand grenade.

He was arrested March 27 after crashing into a glass door in the main lobby of the bank as he attempted to escape a teller, an infantry veteran, who recognized the grenade as a fake.

Hopes Held Gen. Dean Still Alive

By JACK MacBETH

With U.S. First Cavalry Division, Korea, Sept. 28 — (AP) — Reports of U.S. counter-intelligence corps (CIC) officers held out a glimmer of hope today that Maj. Gen. William F. Dean may be alive.

He has been officially listed as missing since July 20 when his doughboys last saw him fighting Red tanks with a GI bazooka team in Taejon.

The CIC said three South Koreans who escaped from the prison stockade at Chongju before it was dynamited by fleeing Reds reported they overheard Communist officers making plans last Saturday to move the former 24th division command post from Chonju to Seoul.

Seoul is about 70 miles north of Chongju.

The CIC reports came as the 24th division, now under command of Maj. Gen. John H. Church, retook Taejon, scene of its most shattering defeat and the loss of its general.

Taejon is 95 miles south of Seoul, the Korean capital.

Two wounded U.S. soldiers reported that 40-odd American prisoners were tied up and shot at Taejon recently.

CIC officers said they did not know whether the three South Korean informants actually saw General Dean before they escaped. A division spokesman said Communist prisoners reported the Reds killed and burned 18 Americans and slew 737 South Korean soldiers and civilians before pulling out of Chongju.

Chongju was recaptured Tuesday. The division spokesman said the Americans were reported slain Sept. 22, four days before the Americans chased the Communists from the city.

Other details of the American slayings at Chongju were not available he said.

The Red prisoners-of-war said 187 of the South Koreans killed were blown to bits when the Communists dynamited the stockade. The others were shot dead, the captured Red prisoners said.

U.S. army units advancing through Seoul Wednesday entered two schools where they believed some 300 American prisoners were held but found the buildings empty.

However, a list of 300 captured Americans was found and sent to the U.S. tenth corps headquarters. Officers at Seoul were told the American prisoners had been transferred from there several days earlier.
